By the end of the Seminar, delegates will understand the rules governing:

- The constitution of companies
- The need for a company secretary
- Shares and share capital, including financial assistance by private companies
- AGMs, other meetings and communications with and decisions by shareholders
- Auditors, accounts and statutory reports
- Derivative claims and actions by members
- Codification of directors' duties
- The implementation of the European Takeover Directive
- A unified corporate law of the United Kingdom

The Seminar is accredited under the Law Society's compulsory Professional Development Scheme with 6 hours.

The Government's wide-ranging reforms of company law are published in the Companies Act 2006, which received the Royal Assent in November 2006 and which will probably be implemented over the course of the next two years.

They represent the biggest shake-up in company law for decades.

This full day course provides a comprehensive overview of the main changes and is a course that no Company Lawyer, Accountant or Company Director can afford to miss!!
